Farmers to certify flue tobacco as 'not tested'

By TOM CONRAD

Farmers to Certify Flue-Cured Tobacco Not "Nested" - The Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation Service now requires tobacco producers to certify that their flue-cured crop delivered for price support has not been nested-- or does not contain concealed foreign material or tobacco of inferior grade, quality or condition.

The rule has been in effect for producers of other kinds of tobacco since last year. Flue-cured producers had nearly completed the marketing process at the time the rule was issued. The change applies to 1982 and subsequent crops of quota tobacco except 1982-crop flue-cured tobacco.

If it is determined that a producer knowingly delivered nested tobacco, the Commodity Credit Corporation will not give that producer price support for the entire lot of tobacco found to be nested, or for any tobacco marketed subsequent to the date of determination for the remainder of the marketing year in which the false certification occurred.

To receive price support, flue-cured growers must plant within their acreage allotment, contribute 7 cents per pound of tobacco marketed to the no-net-cost fund, and certify that they did not use DDT, TDE, toxaphene, or endrin on their crops.

USDA officials say this year's flue-cured tobacco crop could total about 860 million pounds, 14 percent less than last year.

Farm Exports Set at $35 Billion - The value of farm exports for fiscal year 1983 is now forecast at $35.5 billion -- $1 billion below an earlier forecast and almost 10 percent below last year's total.

The slippage in agricultural exports this year reflects the economic recession, weak demand and the value of the U.S. dollar. USDA officials say world markets have become even more competitive this year with many countries discouraging imports and promoting agricultural exports. The high value of the U.S. dollar also has prevented some foreign customers from taking advantage of the low prices prevailing in domestic markets.

According to the report, export volume for fiscal 1983 could fall 7 percent to 147.5 million tons. Grain exports declined 6 million tons from a year earlier. Soybean exports are forecast at 24.8 million tons down 500,000 tons or 2 percent from the May estimate. Cotton exports are forecast at 1.1 million tons, down 100,000 from May.

With farm imports now expected to toal $15.8 billion, the agricultural trade surplus is estimated at nearly $20 billion -- down about $4 billion from last year.

Roy T. Bennett of Concord was selected chairman of the local board, while Russell H. Moore of Gladstone was named as vice-chairman.

Elected to the local Southern States Farm Home Advisory Committee were: Mrs. John F. Alvis of Concord and Mrs. J. Gerald Blanks of Spout Spring.

Mr. Roy T. Bennett of Concord was chosen as a delegate to represent the local membership at the Southern States Cooperative 60th Annual Stockholder's Meeting to be held in November. Mr. Russell H. Moore of Gladstone was named alternate.

G. Maxey Slater of Richmond, a member of Southern States Cooperative regional staff, reported on the over-all Southern States operations. This report also included a slide-tape presentation entitled "Southern States: 100 Percent You," which focused attention on the fact that Southern States is first and foremost, people. Every person involved with Southern States -- patron, employee or supplier -- is responsible for making the cooperative work effectively. The needs of farmers keep changing and it's up to each individual to help Southern States meet those needs.

The report on local operations and services rendered to farmer members in the community was given by Ronald Coleman, co-manager of Coleman & Sons Inc.

There was also a special recognition ceremony for new members, Farm Home Advisory Committee members, as well as those from these groups who were retiring. These included John Harrison, Dennis W. Drinkard, Hunt P. Hamilton, Mrs. Russell L. Cordell, Mrs. E. Carter Martin.

A great opportunity for Adult Volunteer Leaders exists this fall at the Annual Volunteer Leaders Conference at Rock Eagle, Georgia. This year's forum will be October 3-7. It has the reputation as being the best leader training program anywhere. The purpose of the leaders forum which includes volunteers from 13 southern states, the Virgin Islands and Puerto Rico is to help volunteers become more effective 4-H leaders, learn new skills and become knowledgeable about a variety of successful 4-H programs. Details are being sent to volunteer leaders. Application deadline is September 1, 1983.

* * *

Community 4-H Clubs are urged to develop educational exhibits for the Five County Fair in Farmville. Educational exhibits provide two good opportunities for community 4-H Clubs. First they give the young people a chance to plan, develop and put an exhibit together that gives a message, and secondly, they win cash awards which may help the club's treasury.

State 4-H Electric Congress will be held in Richmond next Monday through Wednesday, August 15-17. Appomattox's delegates will be Darrell Conner and Curtis Moore. Senior 4-H'ers from each county in Virginia will participate in this special program which is sponsored by the Virginia Electric Power Suppliers.

* * *

4-H project records will be due in the Extension Office by October 14. Project records are extremely important. Each 4-H member should try to turn in at least one completed project each year.

* * *

The month of September will be our 4-H reorganization month with new clubs, new members and the choosing of new projects. Watch closely for announcements when the various clubs will meet.

Additional 4-H volunteer leaders are needed to help organize and assist with new 4-H Community 4-H Clubs. A community 4-H group is organized to help the young people in a particular community. Parents and other interested adults are asked to assist with these clubs. A 4-H volunteer training session will be held in early fall to assist adults working with 4-H groups.

More on energy efficiency when doing home laundry

Efficient Use Of Energy In Home Laundering

Note: This is part 2 of a two-part article about efficient use of energy in home laundering.

Last week I shared with you some information on how we can save thermal, mechanical, and chemical energy as we do our weekly, or for some of us, daily laundering. I'd like to emphasize some ways to utilize energy effectively and still achieve satisfactory results in laundering. These ways are:

1. Read and follow directions carefully for all laundry products. Start with the recommended amount of detergent. Use more in hard water for larger loads or heavily soiled clothes (I urge you to read the information on laundry products even though it may be the same product you and your mother before you used). These products are always being improved and changed and we find that there is sometimes new and different information on the side panels or the package instructions.
2. Pretreat or presoak stains and heavy soils before washing.
3. Choose a wash, time and cycle suitable for the type of load.
4. Wash a full load, but don't overload the washer. Overloading limits the cleaning action of the washer.
5. Match the water level to the load size. For example, with a smaller load, use a lower water level setting.
6. If the washer has a water return system, reuse the wash water for other loads. Start with the most lightly soiled items first and the recommended amount of detergent. Add more detergent for each additional load.
7. Rinse all loads of clothes in cold water. This saves money and is just as effective as any other way.
8. Use a high spin-speed for very absorbent items to help drying time.
9. Separate lightweight and heavyweight items for faster, more uniform drying.
10. Dry full loads. Small loads are a waste of energy.
11. Don't overload the dryer. The load should tumble freely for fast, wrinkle-free drying.
12. Don't add wet items to a partially dried load.
13. Don't over dry. Besides wasting mechanical energy, over-drying can give a harsh feel to some items and produce shrinkage in others.
14. Don't let items remain in the dryer after it's gone off. This can cause wrinkling, especially in permanent press articles making ironing very necessary.

This again, is a loss of energy.

15. When possible, reload the dryer while it is still warm from a previous load.

This utilizes the residual heat.

16. Clean the lint screen of a dryer after each load. A lint build-up can increase drying time and decrease the efficiency of the dryer.

Homemakers, I hope that this information will help you to make more efficient use of your home laundry center. If you have a homemaking question or problem, call 352-5244 or you may write P.O. Box 488, Appomattox, Va. 24522. It is always a pleasure to hear from you and to help you.

Have a good week!
